Item 7.01 Regulation FD Disclosure.

On July 30, 2014, Eastman Kodak Company (the Company) announced changes that it will implement to the Kodak Retirement Income Plan (KRIP) and the Eastman Kodak Employees' Savings and Investment Plan (SIP), effective January 1, 2015.

Currently, under KRIP, participants accrue a benefit pursuant to a traditional pension formula, which is based upon average participating compensation and years of service, or a cash balance formula, which is calculated based upon a credit equal to 4% of monthly compensation and 1/12th of the annual interest rate on 30-year Treasury securities. Effective January 1, 2015, participants in the traditional pension formula will participate in the cash balance formula and will be eligible for a benefit equal to the sum of the pre-2015 traditional benefit and the post-2014 cash balance benefit. In addition, credits under the cash balance formula will increase from 4% of monthly compensation to 7% of monthly compensation, and the matching contribution that the Company provides under SIP will be eliminated. Monthly interest credits will continue to be made to the cash balance accrual based upon 1/12th of the annual interest rate on Treasury securities.

The Company expects these changes to KRIP and SIP to result in a reduction in the Company's projected benefit obligation related to KRIP of approximately $55 million and a reduction in 2015 expense of approximately $12 million.
